IEM Newsletter

2013

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

I am happy to see that this Newsletter is ready to go to press. The issue reports on a number of significant advances the Centre has made in the last few months. Development of superconducting radio-frequency cavities and cryo-modules, and setting up of related test facilities and technical infrastructure, are crucial to the Department's long term program. As we unfold yet another of the IEM newsletter one is reminded of the exciting juncture at which we stand. It is that time when we are poised to take giant steps and take our alma mater to the zenith. The potential of our students and papers seems to be endless as they cross several milestones with every passing day. A cultural program was organized at the engineering campus where students demonstrated their prowess.
